

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Ben Sasse
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Sasse:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Ben Sasse
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Lamar Alexander
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Alexander:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Lamar Alexander
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. Warren", with a long horizontal line extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Bill Cassidy
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Cassidy:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Bill Cassidy
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. Warren", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Charles Grassley
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Grassley:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Charles Grassley
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Dean Heller
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Heller:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Dean Heller
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. L. Warren". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable James Inhofe
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Inhofe:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable James Inhofe
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Mike Lee
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Lee:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Mike Lee
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. Warren", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Mitch McConnell
Senate Majority Leader
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator McConnell:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Mitch McConnell
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. Warren", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable David Perdue
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Perdue:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable David Perdue
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

David L. Warren
President

National Association
of Independent
Colleges and Universities

1025 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036-5405

Tel: (202) 785-8866
Fax: (202) 835-0003
www.naicu.edu

March 6, 2017

Honorable Pat Roberts
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Roberts:

On behalf of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, I write in support of S. J. Res. 26, a resolution of disapproval under the Congressional Review Act to block implementation of the Department of Education's Teacher Preparation Regulations finalized in October 2016.

NAICU serves as the unified national voice of independent higher education and reflects the diversity of private, nonprofit higher education in the United States. Our member institutions consist of major research universities, church-related colleges, historically black colleges, art and design colleges, traditional liberal arts and science institutions, women's colleges, two-year colleges, and schools of law, medicine, engineering, business, and other professions. With more than 3 million students attending independent colleges and universities, and 825 institutions with teacher preparation programs, the private, non-profit sector of American higher education has a dramatic impact on our nation's larger public interests, including the teaching profession.

Independent colleges and universities have a long history of preparing highly-qualified teachers for America's classrooms. Their education programs range from relatively small institutions' modest teacher education departments to large research institutions, with distinct colleges of education encompassing doctoral programs, and traditions of multi-disciplinary research in teaching, learning, and human development.

We strongly support S. J. Res. 26, as the final Teacher Preparation regulations do not reflect cutting edge practices in the teaching profession, and mandate a federal accountability system that does not help students. Instead, the regulations substitute a one-size-fits-all federal template for professional standards which by definition should be developed and maintained by the profession.

Honorable Pat Roberts
March 6, 2017
Page 2

We believe that high quality and rigor are essential for effective professional teacher preparation programs, and that there should be appropriate accountability for teacher preparation programs at independent colleges and universities. And, we strongly believe that assessments are most effective when made at the institutional level using multiple scientifically valid and reliable measures; and that teacher licensure and certification should remain the primary responsibility of the state, not the federal government.

Thank you for your action on S. J. Res. 26. We look forward to working with you on its passage.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "D. Warren", with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

David L. Warren
President